SUBJECT: Bryston Model T Customer Feedback

Hi Folks – nice comments from a Bryston Model T customer responding to a question on a speaker forum.

“Hey Zissou,

Correct me if I'm wrong, but in your thread at AH you claimed to have owned these in the past: Wilson Audio Sophia 1 , Wilson Audio Watt Puppy 7, Revel Salon, Revel Salon2. You also alluded to owning others like the Linkwitz Orion, KEF 207/2-- or at least spending time with them. Impressive. The Revel Salon2 speakers are regarded as some of the best speakers in the world by many..... especially for accuracy and neutrality.

Here are my questions for you; in your opinion, do the Bryston Model T's outperform the "best speaker in the world" or is it based on value for dollar you make the "revelation" statement?"

“Hi,

Yes I have owned those as well as the Magnepan MG20.1. Firstly there is no "best speaker in the world" by their very design they are imperfect devices and every design is a series of trade offs and strengths that culminate in the final product. The Brystons have a set of strengths that I have not heard in any other full range, multispeaker system.

I certainly have not heard the best speaker in the world and truly doubt I ever will, that is if there is one it could change tomorrow. The Bryston Model T's more than competes with anything I have owned, if they didn't they would have been sold off and I would have moved on. Their coherence and sound-staging abilities differentiate them from the other speakers I have owned whilst retaining their strengths.

This makes them a revelation and their price point and makes this level of performance more accessible to more people. This in and of itself makes these a game changer.

Zissou”
